

Love of sport connects new, old students

We had several young men at Cassidy Elementary this past spring that were from Africa and new to America. My son played junior varsity soccer at Henry Clay High this past year and when the new students saw the flier go home this spring about the Henry Clay soccer camp, they came to ask me how they could sign up. Coach Timothy Bernardi not only welcomed several of them to take part in the camp and waived their fees, but he also set an example for the players, who collected money and outfitted the boys with cleats, shin guards, etc. Kentucky Refugee Ministries provided transportation and assisted in communicating with the families. It was really amazing to see how the Henry Clay soccer community embraced our young players.
