

Languages, cultures blend at festival

Unfamiliar sounds and colorful sights filled Bryan Station High School as FCPS students and visitors made their way through the Regional World Language Festival.

Students carried “passports,” which were stamped as they visited the various stations. Among them were Japanese arts and crafts, Farsi mini language lessons and a German conversation table, along with artwork displays and language/cultural proficiency contests.

First-, second- and third-place winners in the academic competition advance to the State World Language Festival on May 10 at the University of Kentucky.
