

On Thursday Nov. 20, a parent called Southern Elementary to let us know that our crossing guard was not at his location. Several teachers (routinely) walk our students to an intersection where they are met by the crossing guard. Stacey Henderson and Elizabeth Cooper noticed that the crossing guard was not there, walked the students farther than their normal spot, stopped traffic and made sure that all our students were safely across. Ms. Henderson was six months pregnant and was a sight to see her stopping traffic! The same parent called me back to let me know that she was so pleased to see the teachers walk the extra way and make sure that students crossed safely.

– Submitted by Dawn Anestis, Southern Elementary