

Technology students excel in regional contest

Several Fayette County schools participated in the Technology Student Association's regional competition at Eastern Kentucky University, where students squared off in about three dozen contests ranging from computer-aided drafting to prepared speaking.

The kids who advanced are testing their mettle this week at the state level in Louisville; the national competition will be this summer in Denver.

TSA is the only organization specifically devoted to engineering technology/technology education students. Read more about the Kentucky Technology Student Association.
