

Free summer camps for budding teachers

Kentucky high school students interested in teaching as a career choice may participate in regional Future Educators Association summer camps in June and July.

These week-long residential camps held at universities are free for students. Capacity is limited, and each camp will take the first 30 applications on a first-come, first-served basis.

The Future Educators Association offers students unparalleled, age-appropriate professional development opportunities, including an annual conference and access to a state-of-the-art FEA social networking Web site. Through hands-on career exploration opportunities, FEA allows members to assume leadership roles and develop professional skill sets that will serve them throughout their careers. The association also connects students with chances to earn scholarship grants through its sponsoring organization, PDK International.

Kentucky has the most chartered FEA chapters in the nation, with nearly 200 chapters statewide.
